

A Message from Our Conscience

Randa Hamwi Duwaji

I see you today, Humanity, astray
In semblance of safety humbled and hushed Sequestered in fear for dear Life
all else fading to dust
as indeed it must.

There has never been a time such as this:
Binding, bonding
world population
when far beneath
initial doubt
truths untold
and evidence buried
lie heavier, more
profound worries:

What is my purpose?
Why my hurry?

I, Me
My ever-craving greed
for things I should own for what I don't need

In timeless wisdom
new trends do not keep;
so-called luxuries
gone cheap,
as indeed they must:

'Goods,'
with little good in them
have no rightful place
in God's Kingdom

Stand apart, Humanity, stand apart

In what shall come to pass
you have little say.
You, who were blind to all that you hurt
You, who were deaf to the beat of their hearts!

Stay away!

Stay away within your borders
and Nature shall regain her order, as indeed, she must

In God we trust

Humanity,
Take your rightful station
within Creation
Don't live to regret
where you stood today

Was it with the best
the better, or just the good?
Or with those who should've realized
and should've understood?

Stand down, Humanity,
give up the scepter
You do not want this crown!

Stand down
And ... look around

See Life's motion in devotion!
Watch Earth breathing her own
Watch wildlife roam
Watch fish swim free in their ocean
Watch bees keep their nectar
Watch birds tend their young

When you know your place;
When you feel your place
Humankind without color or race

It had to take a disaster to reveal your best

To prove you never were master...

I see you today, Humanity, aware of what you'd taken for granted

Real joy, true wealth in peace, kindness, love, health most precious, most dependable while all else is expendable

Reach out, Humanity, reach out!
You've learnt what it's all about having lived its explanation!

It is entirely your obligation to maintain rightful balance Yours should be a most noble existence
in God's kingdom!

When your moment of silence ends
When you rejoin loved ones and friends enjoy, and guard
what in solitude you found:

Your innermost beings, humble as your spirits rise and tremble in a symphony of beating hearts...

Rejoicing

Rejoicing in being but one choice part of a magnificent whole Honored, and privileged Fulfilling your role.
